COME, IN BEAUTIFUL DREAMS.

Come, in beautiul dreams, love,
Oh! come to me oft,
When the light wing of sleep
On my bosom lies soft;
Oh! come when the sea,
In the moon's gentle light,
Beats soft on the ear,
Like the pulse of the night—
When the sky and the wave
Wear their loftiest blue,
When the dew's on the flower
And the stars on the dew.

Come, in beautiful dreams, love, Oh! come and we'll stray Where the whole year is crowned With the blossoms of May— Where each sound is as sweet

As the cases are as soft
As the breathing of love;
Where the beams kiss the waves,
And the waves kiss the beach, And our warm lips may catch The sweet lessons they teach.

Come, in beautiful dreams, love, Oh! come and we'll fly,
With hand clasped in hand,
On our dream wings we'll go
Where the startight and moonlight
Are blending their glow;
And on the bright clouds we'll linger, Of purple and gold, Till the angels shall envy The bliss they behold.

ANTICS OF A RADICAL JUDGE.-The Wilmington (N. C.) Journal, says: "One of the most remarkable events in the his tory of our North Carolina courts (now, alas, so sadly changed from the past) occurred in the special court of this city yesterday. The case of a white man, by the name of Charles Posner, was on trial, Mr. John L. Holmes, one of the members of our bar, appearing for the defendant as counsel, when Anthony Howe, a coal black negro, and who rejoiced in the dignity of an alderman of the city, was called to the stand, and wanted to be called 'mister' by the counsel, who for long years has known him but as 'Anthony,' The following is the record of the singular proceedings as directed by the court:

'In the case, Anthony Howe, Esq., was called as witness to testify to the character of the complainant. Mr. Holmes, counsel for the defendant, aldressed Mr. Howe as Anthony.' The witness said he did not object to being so styled, but objected to the tone and manner in which he was addressed. The court ruled that the witness had a right to demand that he should be addressed in a proper manner, and with respect and not with familiarity, whereupon counsel refused to be governed by the decision of the court in the matter. and it was ordered that a fine of $10 be entered against Mr. Holmes for contempt of court for refusing to obey this order and take his seat when directed to do so. Mr. Holmes again peremptorily refused ination, and insisted on the right to cross order of the court to address him other wise than by his first name, Anthony, after objection made and sustained to that style of address on the part of the witness The Judges, the whole world; and the trial and the same order had been extended to the other counsel: upon which it was that he could do, he averred, to serve the ordered that the fine be $20 against Mr. John H. Holmes for contempt of court. The witness at this point was discharged by the court, the attorney, Holmes adding, 'Stand aside, Anthony,' in the hearing of the court, and in contempt of its decision and authority, and it was then ordered that the fine be $100 against Mr. Holmes, and the particulars be recorded.' For the benefit of strangers who do not know the parties it may be well to state that this Judge Cantwell, the presiding officer of this court, is the man who wore the first secession cockade in R leigh, and was afterward confederate military Governor of Norfolk. His action yesterday can but he viewed as an indignity to the whole bar, a direct attack upon the profession through one of its members, which, no goubt, the members of the bar will properly resent. It may not be amiss to add that we hear that the court ordered Mr. Holmes to address the witness either as Mr.' Howe, or 'Alderman' Howe. On Saturday, Mr. Holmes appeared in court, when his honor suggested that an answer be filed by the defendant of the alleged contempt. This was declined, and after or reception was thoroughly successful further discussion Mr. Holmes paid the unless she were present. More than one fine, which amounted altogether to $130 25.

MISSING-A YOUNG LADY.

A Detective's Story.

Among the potentates of Wall street, few held a higher position in the estimation of all, than Messrs. Archbold and Horton, and great was the sympathy uni versally expressed when the former, a man of middle age only, died suddenly at his residence, in the vicinity of Fifth avenue. For years previously to this occurrence, Mr. Horton had dwelt with his partner and his family, and Mrs. Archbold, on her husband's demise, could look to no firmer friend than he; so, after the affairs of the firm had been settled, and she knew the amount of the income she would be entitled to enjoy, she begged him still to remain at her house on the same footing as of yore. This arrangement would be all the more pleasing to her, inasmuch as she was the mother of three daughters, who were just ripening into womanhood, and would feel the benefit of a male friend, almost old enough to be their father, and who had so long been associated with them by terms of intimacy, Mr. Horton was a man of about forty-five years, who had long been separated from his wife by mutual agreement, but did not suffer in the esteem of his neighbors on this account, as it was generally conceded that the fault lay entirely with the lady, and he invariably himself deplored the misunderstanding that had arisen. In a word, Mrs. Horton was jealous, and yet was unable to assign any cause for being so. During the few years in which she and her husband lived as man and wife, she was continually accusing him of infidelities, of which she could produce no proofs, and their lives had been rendered so miserable by this continual bickering that they had decided to live apart for the future. As they were separated by no judicial decree, it was not legally incumbent on her husband to provide for his wife's maintenance, still he did so, although the lady described the sum paid her as being totally inadequate to her condition, and was ever striving to collect evidence of Mr. Horton's alleged irregularities, that she might be enabled to procure a divorce and compel him by law to contribute more bounteously to her support. This evidence, however, was not forthcoming, and Mr. Horton was accounted a man of excellent moral character and behavior, by the society in which he moved, and was blamed by none, but pitied to obey the order of the court touching by all. Personally he was handsome, of the treatment of the witness under examtall stature and good presence, and postany decided-preference. Did any one see young woman. Mr. Horton seated himsessed of a most winning tongue, which examine without complying with the not only was of the greatest service to him in his business, but made him a universal favorite with the fair sex.

> When Mrs. Archbold represented her forlorn condition to him, he at once entered fully into her plans. Anything imen. widow and orphans of his lamented friend would afford him heartfelt joy, and as he was unblessed with children of his own. in consequence of the unhappy relations existing between his wife and himself, he would, to the best of his powers, save Mrs. Archbold every unnecessary trouble, and stand as far as possible in the place of a father to the three girls. Matters were thus amicably arranged, and Mr. Horton came in time to be recognized as master of the house, and whispers were circulated abroad, that, were it not for the obstacle in the shape of his wife, he would actually have become so by contracting a marriage with the relict of his deceased partner

As we have only to deal with the eldest daughter, Mary Archbold, it is needless to introduce her sisters, or their uncle, who likewise formed one of the household. Mary was a charming girl of twenty, who had been completing her town. education abroad, at the time of her father's death, and had only recently returned. As it was known that she would inherit a considerable sum on her marriage she was much sought after, and no dance gentleman was pointed at by rumors as likely to win the prize, and the home circle were ever urging her to make her choice quickly. That her heart was engaged in some quarter or other was the universal tive establishment of industry, two cents belief, as her manner was strangely altered since her arrival from the Contisocial statistics, and ten cents per mile for unfrequently discovered in tears, but ever refused to give any clew to the why or the wherefore; attributing her sadness to her not feeling quite well, or some other equally trivial excuse. Thinking that it their own course, and totally unsuspicious of any impending evil, her mother ceased to speak with her on the subject, and endeavored to dissipate her melancholy by providing all kinds of amusements to divert her. All was in vain, and one day struck him, and absurd even as it appeared not return, and her distracted mother was almost heartbroken.

No one felt the blow more than Mr. Horton. After she had been absent some hours he had been sent for from the office. Without his ordering his buggy. He had, and his pale face and evident agitation, proved that he feared the worst. But he did not at all waste time. The evil was done, and the remedy was to be found. 'It may be," he said, "only a girlish freak. She may have run away to some of her friends. Let us immediately communicate to all to whom she is the least likely to go." He assured Mrs. Archbold that all would yet be well, and asserted that it was preposterous to think of any great harm happening to one brought up with so much care. "You must scold her finely when she comes back, for giving us such a fright." All he could do or say, however, led to no good result, and he was at last unwillingly compelled, by the constant entreaties of the mother, to call in the aid of the police. Against this step he had entreated emphatically; he was afraid of the publicity that must inevitably ensue, patiently for the upshot, whatever it and the consequent scandal. His objections were overruled, one by one, and the case was entrusted to a well known detective of this city, with full power and authority to act as he thought best. This gentleman, crediting the old adage that "two heads are better than one," procured the services of a companion, who had often been retained for cases of this kind. Having been put in possession of all the information that could be given him, the character of the young lady, her portrait, her dress, the names of her companions, with their addresses, her admirers, and sundry peculiar little characteristics, he set himself to work to solve the problem. Both the detectives agreed at once on one point, although they carefully kept it to themselves. As the officer in question 'Whenever a girl suddenly runs away in taken. this fashion, a man is at the bottom of it. Let us only find the man, and the rest will be easy." He thereupon cautiously questioned her sisters, and even the domestics, as to whether any one gentleman had appeared to be more agreeable than any other. He then prepared a carefully written description, and forwarded it, together with her likeness, to the various police stations in this city and other large towns. He visited every hole and corner in New York, watched the railway depot, interrogated the clerks. The hue-and-cry was raised everywhere, but raised in vain.

Now and again a message would be sent to him saving that a young lady, answering the description of the truant was at some distant town, and thither at once would the detective repair, only to findthat he had his journey for his pains, and that he was as much at sea as ever. Once he fancied that he saw Miss Arch bold in a carriage on Broadway, and followed it for a long time, only to acknowledge himself again mistaken; but he was convinced nevertheless that she had not left the country, and he much doubted whether she had left the

An unusually liberal reward had been offered by Mr. Horton, for any information that could lead to her recovery, and constant applications were made by individuals who professed either to have seen her themselves or to have heard from a wild goose chase was the result, until at last the detective began to fear that she had made away with herself, and actually visited the Morgue more than once when the body of a dead woman was advertised. would be best to allow matters to take Still he did not relinquish his orignal idea, and when pressed by his companion to try some other tack, only repeated what he had said before.

The other laughed at him, her manner, but from that errand she did but did not oppose his suggestion, as it gave at least a promise of something to do. Mr. Horton, in common with many other gentlemen, was extremely fond of of late, been much worked at his office, and frequently slept at a hotel when he found it too late to enjoy an evening at home. There was nothing extraordinary in all this-more particularly as that home was no longer as cheerful as it used to be before the death of the father and the loss of the daughter-and no one had paid any attention to his conduct.

> The detective commenced his espionage immediately, and Mr. Horton was carefully followed wherever he went. His drives were usually in the direction of Harlem; and as he was but little learned in horses, and would have as soon thought of driving a locomotive as a fast trotter, the officer became curious to see what is was that induced him so constantly to patronize that road. He therefore hired a vehicle, and having instructed the coachman to follow Mr. Horton's buggy waited

Of one thing he was soon convinced. Wherever Mr. Horton drove, it was not to Harlem, for after pursuing that direction for a short distance, he turned his horse's head and drove back towards the city. Closely followed by the detective in the fly, he drove to a house in the immediate neighborhood of the New York Hotel. Here he drew up, and having rung the bell, entered with the air of a man who was perfectly at home. The detective, in the meantime, left his carriage and took up a position where he could command everything without being himself visible. Nearly an hour elapsed, and Mr. Horton did not re-appear. What on earth is he up to? thought the detective; there must be some great attraction here; and he conremarked to the writer of these lines, gratulated himself on the step he had Presently the front door opened, and Mr. Herton stepped into the street with a lady on his arm, when he tenderly assisted her into the buggy. The lady's face was thickly veiled, and the looker-on could not guess even at her age, except tain that she had a letter at all. Could he This led him straight to the Jersey ferry, see any of her handwriting? Yes, plenty and in course of time alighted, carriage and all in Jersey City. The chase set off without delay towards Newark, in happy ignorance of a pursuer. When Newark was reached, Mr. Horton stopped at a hotel, and, accompanied by the lady, went in, after ordering his horse to be put up for an hour or two. The detective soon learned that he had ordered dinner, and, as his own appetite was good, resolved to imitate his example. While his meal was preparing, he lottered about the passage in the hope of obtaining a peep at the fair unknown. Presently the opportunity came. One of the waiters left the door open, and through the crack the lady was distinctly visible.

The detective fell back as if he had been shot; plunged his hands into his pockets to find the portrait of Miss Archbold; presently he pulled it out, looked at it attentively, and then took another neen through the crack in the door. Apparently satisfied, he slowly walked away his countenance exhibiting a mixture of the greatest surprise, indignation, and self-satisfaction. At this moment a waiter met him.

"Hallo!" said he. "Do that gentleman and lady often come here?"

"Two or three times a week, sir," was the reply.

"The deuce they do," said the detective slowly. "Well, I am-" what, he did not say, for chuckling to himself he went out juniped into the hack and returned at full speed to New York. He was conveyed straight to Mrs. Archbold's, and demanded to see her alone. His manner was so consome friend who had seen her, and many strained that she instantly divined that something most startling had happened. "You have news-news of Mary."

> "Yes, Mrs. Archbold, I have, but I don't know how I'm to tell you."

"Where is she? What is she doing?

Speak, man, speak! "Mrs. Archbold, you ask Mr. Horton, he'll tell you better than I can." "Mr. Horton! What do you mean"I guess so-he ought to."

"What is this mystery? Tell me all you have to tell me, plainly. I can bear

"Well, don't blame me. Mrs. Archbold -if you will have the truth-Mr. Horton has known all along where your daughter

"How dare you tell me so-how dare vou hint-"

"It's of no use being angry, madam, with me-I have only done my duty. I tell you I have seen your daughter and Mr. Horton together this afternoon, have but just left them, and can take you to the house which I saw them leave.'

Mrs. Archbold did not faint or scream, but her features grew rigid with anger, and pale with agitation. She left the room, and in a very few minutes re-entered it, dressed and ready to go out.

"Come," she said ; and the two silently started on their errand. When they arrived at the house the detective rang the bell, and asked the servant if Miss Arch. bold lived there.

"No sir, we have none but married pee ple here."

"Well," showing the portrait, "does this lady live here?"

"Yes sir, she is not in at present."

"Very well, then; we will come in and wait for her; but you need not tell her that any one is here."

The hours passed very tediously, and the fortitude of Mrs. Archbold had almost given away, when a carriage drove up to the door, and immediately after her daughter's voice bidding some one "good night," was heard. The carriage slowly departed, and the detective, bidding the mother keep close behind him stepped quietly into the hall, and stood face to face with the girl he had been so long

"Good evening, Miss Archbold." "That is not my name," and she looked him full in the face. "Indeed. Do you not, then, know this lady ?"

Her bravado was all gone then, and uttering a scream that made even the experienced policeman wince, she covered her face with her hands and fell fainting to the floor. The detective raised the young lady in his arms, carried her out, and placed her by her mother in a carriage he had procured. It is no intention of mine to recount the scene then witnessed between Mrs. Archbold and her child. The detecthe like and hopes never to meet it again. They were both somewhat composed before they reached home, and the mother had again nerved herself to meet the snake whom she had so long called friend. Mr. Horton had come in, and was in the dining-room, where he had been told by the other two daughters, who had been previously instructed, that Mrs. Archbold had gone to take tea with an acquaintance. He turned quickly round, smiling blandly. as the handle of the door was turned, and was about to advance-when he stood transfixed with terror and grasped the table for support. Mrs. Archbold never seok, but, drawing nerself up to her full height, pointed to her daughter who had sunk into a chair and was sobbing convulsively. Her sisters, rushing to her, side, fondled and embraced her, calling her by name and entreating her to be calm. Presently, Mr. Horton, staggered, rather than waiked out, without breaking the silence, the street door was open and shut, and he was gone. "Well," said I, "and how did it all end?"

"Oh! it was hushed up as well as it could be, though scores of people in New York will recognize the story and know the actors in it. Horton had fascinated the girl, I suppose, he certainly was a very pleasant man. He flattered her, and filled her head with rubbish, and I have no doubt had an eye to her money, eventuall. I was the means of his wife obtaining a divorce from him: and I believe he is going to marry Miss Archbold, but I doubt if her mother will ever speak to him again, although they often meet." "What! is he in the city still?"

"Certainly, and doing a good business. He is a clever fellow. He knew that he had a better chance of being unsuspected if the girl remained close at home; and I must confess that if it had not been for a whim, I should never have caught him."

What a contrast there sometimes is between an adjective and its adverb! Reflect, for example, on the wide differnce there is between the man who is constant in love and the man who is con stantly in love!

PETERS & CO.

SUMMER FALLOWING AND DEEP PLOW-ING .- We have frequently called the attention of our farmers to the necessity of summer fallowing their lands and plowing deep. It has always been our firm belief that this course of treatment to our lands would insure a crop even the dryest of seasons, and the experience of the past season fully confirms our belief. Whereever, in this county, this course has been followed, good crops have been invariably produced. On the contrary, however, wherever parties waited for the rains, and then scratch-plowed for planting, the crops are total failures, except, perhaps, in a few extreme instances. As particular instances of the first method we give the following, vouched for by parties thoroughly conversant with the facts:

In the Alabama settlement, Major Redding prepared his land by plowing very deep, last year, and letting it fallow till the rainy season set in, when it was planted. He has been rewarded with a very fair crop, notwithstanding that there has been scarcely any rain on it since last February. Samples of wheat left in our office are as good as any we have seen this season; the heads are large and full and the grains are plump. While the crop is perhaps not as heavy as it would have been had the season been more favorable, it will average with the majority of the crops in the more favored localities of the State. Immediately adjoing the farm of and planted after the usual style followed by California planters.

Over on Dry Creek, Mr. Jno. Wyatt has succeeded in raising fine crops, probably unsurpassed in the county, by properly cultivating his land, after the method we have described.

The soil in this county is of a character that readily admits of deep plowing, and it is not very difficult to do it in the fall after the crops have been removed. In favorable seasons planters can produce fair crops under most any circumstances, but under the treatment we have advised they are always improved and are insured against drouth.

A BILL has been introduced in Congress, we notice, to grant lands in California to aid the construction of canals, to carry water for irrigating purposes. We solemnly enter our protest against the giving away of any more of the public domain for the purpose of building up money monopolies. We have had enough of such legislation from this mercenary Congress, and we think that it is high time that it was stopped, though we have no idea that it will be. If people want to build water canals let them build them with their own money. Does the farmer, or the stock raiser, or the miner, receive any aid from Government to assist them along in any of their undertakings? To be sure not. Then why help the spec-

WHITMORE RETURNED TO CONGRESS. Horace M. Whitmore, the South Carolina carpet-bagger and cadetship vender, who was expelled from Congress last winter because he got caught selling a cadetship at West Point, has been reelected by his admiring constituency. Of course this shows conclusively that the negroes are competent electors, and are able to judge the kind of man best suited to send to Congress. Candidly, however, there is but little difference between him and the other radical members. He got caught, and the others have not.

WE were favored last week with a call from the Hon. J. H. Lawrence, editor and proprietor of that ably edited and well conducted, journal, the Mariposa Free Press. Mr. L. was out on a canvassing tour, and he informed us that he was meeting with good success.

WE notice that our neighbors at Snellings and at Visalia are making big preparations for the celebration of the Anniversary of American Independence. The preparations are on an extensive scale and they expect to have high times.

CAIPTAL PUNISHMENT.

necessary, by all, when a man was guilty of killing a fellow man, that he must expatiate his crime upon the gallows, or in other words a legal murder must be committed to satisfy a violated law. But the opinions of men change as they become enlightened. Men are beginning to start up as champions against capital punishment, and throughout the entire country a respectable body of people are favoring the abolishment of this heathen mode of dealing with crimnals. They deem it but the promulgation of the ancient doctrine, so seriously denounced in the Bible, of 'an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." The hanging of a man for taking the life of a fellow-being does not make the crime the less, nor does it in any manner alleviate the feelings of any who may have been aggrieved by reason of such crime. It is true it has a tendency to lessen crime by overawing men, but we think that the ame end might be gained by confining culprits to the State's Prison for life or a ng term of years, and no officer would then be compelled to stain his hands with a fellow's blood to appease the demands of an offended law. It is not fear of death nor dread of confinement that prevents men from committing crime, but it is the pride of man; the dread of disgrace. I: would seem that the stigma of being a prevent crime as taking the life of a culprit. We remember reading an incident of a man who was on trial for a homicide, and he knew that he should be punished, but whether by hanging or being sent to the penitentiary he knew not. When the judge passed the sentence of death upon him, however, he quickly arose and thanked the officer, saying, "that he feared that he would be sent to the penitentiary, where he would constantly be harrowed by the thought of his disgrace." We regard the day not far distant when capital punishment will be abolished, for even now it is hard to get a jury to pass judgment of murder in the first degree

"THE UNITED STATES IS!"

Until a few years ago it was deemed Referring to Mr. Grant's recent procla mation the N. Y. World says: "Our Irish fellow-citizens must not be too hard upon President Grant for his outburst against the Fenians. He begins his proclamation in a way which ought to satisfy them, by murdering the Queen's English. Solemnly to all mankind the President declares that with her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland the United States is at peace!' Is they, indeed? And am the Alabama claims then settled? And are the President really about to set forth on a visit to h's very good sister at Windsor Castle ?

"We are inclined to think that the singular verb was used purposely, and not with murderous intentions against the Queen's English as supposed by the World. The Radical idea now is," says the Examiner, "that we are no longer United States or States united, but one grand consolidated nationality. To make us such has been the constant aim of the Radical leaders. They have striven with a zeal untiring in its purpose, to overthrow the work of the Fathers, and to strike down the rights and individualities of the States. John W. Dwinelle expressed it some four years ago in a Fourth of July oration in this city very pointedly. He declared that our motto, E pluribus unum, did not mean what it had been generally interconvict would have the same power to preted to mean, one out of many, or one composed of many, but 'From many we | have become one.' And thus with all the radical leaders to day. On their theory it is correct to say the United States 'is.' With them 'the United States 'means a central oligarchy or a congressional directory, or a national usurpation. 'Is' would follow all these gramaticaly. It is true, in every State paper to be found in the archives of the Government from the days of Washington to the issuance of Grant's Fenian proclamation, "the United States' are made to share of wealthy investment which gives agree with plural verb; but this is a pro- an impetus to discovery, 300 miles from gressive age. Perhaps Mr. Grant was restrained by a wholesome in aid of its development, and make this deference to the Congressional Directory. While they concur in the 'is' theory, they would represent our singularity themselves.

At any rate we are glad that the 'new nation, has been at last officially pro claimed. But why not change its name tion? Why not adopt the name of Grantania, or Lincolnia, or Stantonia? TOWN AND COUNTY.

MILLERTON, ETC .- We have quite a number of letters from various portions of the county asking for a description of Millerton. So, in order to save trouble, we have determined to write and publish one: Millerton is the county seat of one of the most flourishing and rapidly growing agricultural counties in the State, and is consequently a place of much and is, consequently, a place of much importance. It is situated on the south bank of the San Joaquin river, near where that turbulent stream leaves the mountains to water the arid plains. It contains four stores (three of them China), one hotel, one average and post office three saleons. one express and post office, three saloons, two stables, one butcher shop, one blacksmith shop, one shoemaker shop, one drug store, one barber shop, one saddlery and harness store, one furniture and cabinet maker's shop, one tailor shop, and one printing office (that of the Fresno Expostron, four lawyers and one doctor, and contains the court house and jail of Fresno county, a large, splendid, well finished brick and stone building, and quite a number of private residences. Formerly it was much larger than at present, but a large portion of the town—nearly three-fourths—was washed away by floods from the river. It is the center of a very large agricultural district lying south and west, and is the rost office for a propolation of agricultural district lying south and west, and is the post office for a population of about 1,500 persons. Contiguous to it is Jones' Ferry, a trading post of considerable note, situated a few miles further down the river, also Dry Creek settlement, Buchanan, and the Arcola settlement. The county is rapidly filling up with people, all of whom are turning their attention to stock raising and agriculture. The most flourishing settlements in the county most flourishing settlements in the county are on King's river, in the vicinity of the fowns of Kingston and King's river. The county contains about 1,200 voters, and about 6,000 inhabitants, all told, and the assessable property will amount this year to upwards of $4,000,000. The climate is very healthy, and but little sickness of any character prevails. The average range of temperature is about 66 degrees. Lands are rapidly increasing in value, and most flourishing settlements in the county Lands are rapidly increasing in value, and Lands are rapidly increasing in value, and the building of a railroad through the San Joaquin Valley will add greatly to the thrift and prosperity of the county. Mines of gold and copper of considerable richness exist in this vicinity, while in the south western portion of the county the New Idria, one of the richest quicksilver mines in the State, exists. The taxes are light, and the financial affairs of the county are in a most satisfactory condition, it being literally out of debt and the treasury containing about $70,000 gold,

JOHN FRASER, arrested for assaulting Louis Robeti with a knife, the particulars of which we gave in our last issue, waived an examination, before Justice Rumble, and his bail was fixed at $2,500. He refused to give bond and was committed to jail to await the action of the Grand Jury. In this connection we would say, in behalf of the prisoner, and to correct an erroneous statement made by us, on information, in our last issue, that Mr. Fraser, instead of bearing a bad character, was well thought of in his community. Our informants say that they got him confounded with another person. He is a man upwards of fifty years of age, and formerly lived in another person. He is a man upwards of fifty years of age, and formerly lived in Mariposa county, is a member of the I. O. O. F., in good standing, and was highly respected. We dislike making corrections, but justice demands it at our hands in this instance.

A FEW days since, we learn, a man entered the Indian camp near McCullough & Co.'s saw mill and set fire to their sweat house, and it was completely destroyed. What reason he had for committing the act does not appear, but, at any rate, it was uncalled for. The Indians are peaceable and we see no reason for exciting their anger, as they can readily do the settlers of that locality much harm, by firing the grain and the grass. A correspondent writing us on the matter says: "A match in the hands of a revengeful Indian could do us incalculable injury."

We think our judicial officers should be well pleased with their little feathered compeer.

ON Saturday night thick clouds covered the heavens, and indications were very favorable for a heavy fall of rain, but, fortunately, only a few drops fell. The clouds, however, continued to hang over us throughout Sunday, and on the evening of that day a heavy thunder shower set in. Not a very great quantity of rain fell at this point, but in the mountains above us the storm was very severe.

From Mr. H. C. Daulton we learn that in the vicinity of his ranch, grasshoppers, almost without number, abound. They have destroyed everything of a vegetable nature that was green, even to eating the leaves from the grape vines and from the trees. On this side of the river, as far as we know, at least, these pests have not appeared in any considerable numbers.

'OT .- The weather during last week has been decidedly hot, the thermometer ranging at about 100 deg. in the shade every day. The nights are, however, cool and pleasant: this coupled with the fact that we have excellent, cool water to drink makes the situation not so bad as it might be.

Time Tests the Merit of all Things. EFFOR THIRTY YEARS. PERRY DAVIS PAIN KILLER!

Has been tested in every variety of climate, and by almost every nation known to Americans. It is the almost constant companion and inestimable friend of the missionary and the traveler, on sea and land, and no one should travel on our Lakes and Rivers without it.

It is a speedy and safe remedy for burns, scalds, cuts, bruises, wounds and various other injuries, as well as for dysentery, diarrhea, and bowel complaints generally, and is admirably suited for every race of men on the face of the globe.

Be sure you call for and get the genuine Pain Killer, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine. Directions accompany each bottle.

Price, 25 ets., 50 ets and $1 00 Per Bottle.

Sold by all Druggists.

More Causes of Blood Poison.

Excessive labor or undue excitement some times occasion serious sickness by causing an accelerated motion to the blood. Grief, fear and anxiety hurt by making the blood to circulate slower. Both causes may produce serious evils to the health unless prevented by timely aid. Here we are admonished of the superior advan tages of Brandreth's Pills. For if the blood goes too fast, from nervous or other causes, they allay the turmoil and are healing balm to the brain. While, should the blood circulate too slowly, tinting the skin with a dark hue, they at once relieve the blood of its excess of carbon; thus they relieve the mind and restore the health. Should an organ be weaker than the rest, there mpure matters from the blood will be deposited. This is the way lumps, boils, tumors, carbuncles, are produced. All are cured, often prevented, by the use of BRANDRETH'S PILLS.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

Country Children.

Little fresh violets,
Born in the wild wood!
Sweetly illustrating
Innocent childhood:
Shy as the antelope—
Brown as a berry—
Free as the mountain air,
Romping and merry.

Blue eyes and hazel eyes Peep from the hedges, Shaded by sun bonnets, Frayed at the edges; Up in the apple trees, Heedless of danger, Manhood in embryo Stares at the stranger.

Out in the hilly patch, Seeking the berries— Under the orchard tree, Feasting on cherries— Tramping the clover blooms Down mong the grasses, No voice to hinder them, Dear lads and lasses!

No grim propriety—
No interdiction;
Free as the birdlings
From city restriction!
Coining the purest blood,
Strengthening each muscle,
Donning health's armor
'Gainst life's coming bustle!

Dear little innocents! Dear little innocents!
Born in the wild wood;
Oh, that all little ones
Had such a childhood!
God's blue spread over them,
God's green beneath them,
No sweeter heritage
Could we bequeath them!

THE POWER OF LOVE -A good man once said to his daughter: "Why is it that exerybody loves you?"

"I do not know." answered the child "except that it is because I love everybody.

This was the secret of Lisa's power of winning universal affection. Her little heart seemed brimming over with kind words and good deeds. She was never seen gloomy or unhappy, because her whole delight consisted in her indulging her love of bestowing pleasure on others, and therefore she never knew what it was to be sad. People may talk as they will, but it is within ourselves alone that the materials of happiness are to be found. A gentle and loving spirit, though it may seem a long time fruitless, will at last win love in return. It is useless to say, "I would be kind and affectionate, if he or she would be in return." Begin by showing love, and a requital will not fail to follow.

LESSONS .- "Mother," said Henry, "I can't make Mary put her figures as I tell her."

"Be patient, my dear, and do not speak so sharply."

"But she won't let me tell her how to rut the figures, and she don't know how to do it herself," said Henry verry pettishly "Well, my dear, if Mary won't learn a lesson in figures, suppose you try to teach her one in patience. This is harder to teach and harder to learn than any lesson in figures; and perhaps, when you have learned this, the other will be easier for both of you."

Henry hung his head, for he felt it was a shame to any little boy to be fretted by such a little thing, or, indeed by anything, and he began to think that perhaps he deserved to be blamed as much as Mary.

Children very often complain of their playmates, or brothers and sisters when they are very much in fault themselves. A fretful, impatient child makes himself and all about him very unhappy. Will you all try to learn a lesson of patience?

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON .- Judge of Baltimore is an able judge and a pious man. He knows for what the Island of Jamaica is chiefly celebrated, and things most consolatory to fallen men are rum and true religion.

Disdaining to imbide perdendicularly in bar-rooms, he keeps a demijohn of conceeded Otard in his office, and there slakes as thirst or inclination prompts.

The Judge has a son who knows his father's habits, and emulates them with filial assiduity.

On a Sunday morning the Judge would

"Well, Rufus, going to the first Presbyterian with me this morning?"

"No, father; I reckon I'll go down to the second Methodist."

But on his way to the edifice, Rufus uniformly stopped at the office, unlocked the old gentleman's closet and indulged himself with the pleasant fluid.

Every Sunday morning the Judge repeated his laudable inquiry, but Rufus preferred the second Methodist.

The Judge soon began to notice a marked diminution in the contents of the demijohn, and rightfully suspected who was the culprit. The Judge emptied the remaing liquor into another vessel, and put it in another place. Next Sunday morning came the usual interogatory:

"Going with me this morning, Rufus?" "No, father; I reckon I'll stick to the second Methodist!"

On reaching the office and taking hold of the demijohn, he not only saw with disgust the empty jug, but noticed a small piece of paper attached to the handle, on which was legibly inscribed these words .

"Second Methdist closed for repairs." After church, father and son met, and looking curiously at each other, smiled a little smile but said nothing.

The "repairs" on that Methodist build-have not yet been completed.

CROPS WITHOUT IRRIGATION. - The Californian has the following concerning this subject: That irrigation is not indispensable to the successful cultivation of the lands in than a sufficient supply of moisture for the raising of crops. Recent settlers north of Anaheim, fearing the effects of the drouth, proposed to construct a ditch to convey water from Santa Anna river, to irrigate their lands. Several old residents refused to co-operate in the movement. and we publish an extract from a letter of one, relating to the condition of crops this year, which has been so unusually dry, and giving his opinion on the subject of irrigation. The writer is W. R. Olden and his letter is dated Anaheim, May 6: " Farmers in the northern part of this State are hard to please about rain; if we had only one third of what they have, there would be no complaint here, we have only had a few slight showers that fell at long intervals, and did no; penetrate the ground, and were soon dried out by the north winds that followed. The fact is, the farmers don't deserve to have any crops; they plow from one to three inches deep and then trust to luck. With abundant rains they make a crop, but let a short interval of dry weather ensue, and their hen scratched fields soon dry up. The case is the same here. Hardly any one does any more than to scratch the soil, and, of course, excepting in a few moist spots, the grain is dried up and dead. My potatoes are growing splendidly and premise a good yield. Part of my barley looks very well; that part which was sown on dry ground does not look so well. The flax is growing well and looks remarkably prosperous, stands the dry weather astonishingly; it was sown at least one month too late, but as it is I hope to get a fair crop of seed-but it will GRAND CROSS OF THE LEGION e too short for the fibre to amount to much, unless we should have rain I do not expect. I hope to make a fair crop of both corn and beans; the former I have lanted and the latter I am planting now. The soil is moist and in splendid order, and if the fogs don't disappoint me as well as the rain, I shall continue to plant them for three weeks to come, and intend to subsoil all the land I plant hereafter. I place my dependence entirely upon the natural moisture. The vineyards look splendidly, and none of them, or very few have been irrigated; they don't require it, deep rooted plants find plenty of moisture in this section of the country. Irrigation on a large scale is a humbug, deep plowing is all that is required. If I had been here two months sooner I would have had full crops of everything. I am, however, confident of a fine return.

GAPES IN CHICKENS .- When you find them showing symptoms of this malady, you will find it a simple and successful remedy to mix with one quart of corn meal, one teaspoonfull of black mustard seed, and feed them. They will be healthy and have a vigorous and lively growth. I speak from three years' experience, and without the loss of one chicken.

In a recent debate in Congress Mr. Eldridge, of Wisconsin, declared that the word loyalty always reminded him of a definition of it by an army contractor during the war, when asked to explain what he meant by saying he felt loyal. 'I meant," said the contractor, "that I felt like stealing something." Mr. Eldridge continued, that for himself, he was patriotic, not loyal. The word did not belong to this country; it only belongs to Massa-

VICTOR HUGO says that the only ques tion the Emperor Napoleon has a right to address to the French people is this 'Ought I to leave the Tuileries for Vincennes and give myself up to justice?" To this the reply given is "Yes."

THE damps of autumn sink into the leaves and prepare them for the necessity of their fall. And thus insensibly are we, as years close around us, detached from our tenacity of life by the gentle pressure of recorded sorrows.

A troubled mind is often eased by main taining a cheerful demeanor. The effort withdraws its attention from the cause of pain, and the cheerfulness which it promotes in others extends by sympathy to itself.

FOR SEWING MACHINES.

THE Machine which bears his The Machine which bears his name has long been regarded as the standard of excellence, and has become celebrated the world over. The work done by these Machines is unsurpassed—sewing the thinnest muslin or the thickest cloth, with equal facility; and requiring no extra adjusting for uneven thickness or passing over seams; it turns its own hem as it sews, sewing a seam stronger than the fabric itself. To see it hem, fel; tuck, braid, cord, quilt and gather, it seems more like a thing of life than a machine moved by the will of the operator. It is capable of doing any description of sewing that is required in a 'amily; and also for seamstresses and dressmakers it will be found invaluable. They seldom or never give any trouble in operating, and in a word, are the

AYERS' CHERRY PECTORAL,

AYERS' CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Coughs, Asthma and Commungton, etc.,

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy ror pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given against incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and, indeed, as all are sometimes subject to colas and soughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchittis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of ther, here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fally maintained.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely
